

Major Improvements On Track

House Corp has a long-term objective of providing the chapter with a distinct competitive advantage when seeking new members (and, of course, for the enjoyment of active members) by delivering, year in and year out, one of the best-maintained properties on the SU campus. A considerable effort is undertaken with both the summer turn-around, which allows us to keep up with the little things, and adhering to a long-term capital plan for major work.

Summer 2016 was no exception, with Phase 1 upgrades to fire sprinkler system mains and electrical service and distribution panels. Summer 2017, we will take on Phase 2 with fire sprinklers being extended into all bedrooms and rewiring the second and third floors, which will eliminate the 'knob and tube' wiring dating back to the original construction.

With this work done, we will have completed a major life safety upgrade called for in the capital plan. We will need about five years to pay off the term loan taken out to cover the cost of this work. We have several smaller projects—like foyer and dining room slate floor replacement—to be done. The next major project, targeted for summer 2020, will be the overhaul of the overall building envelope. This will include the replacement of the wood clapboard siding with a more durable material, like Boral Tru-Exterior, along with extensive work on the roof to replace the flat upper roof and repair the sloped natural slate where needed.

Please welcome these new members to the board of directors: Phil Oldham, Psi Psi '65, and Hunter Viscarello, Psi Psi '14. Phil is serving as alumni chapter editor for the Saltine Sig, and, while based in Syracuse, Hunter will be helping us keep an eye on all things locally. I also want to thank long-time board members

Chapter Continues its Successes

The Psi Psi Chapter continues to thrive. This year has been a great one so far. We began with a very successful fall rush, taking in men we found worthy of wearing the White Cross. Recruitment has been something we pride ourselves on and we continue to excel in. We are excited for them to learn and grow as young men in the coming years inside the doors of 737 Comstock Ave.

Our philanthropic efforts are still very strong. We have begun a nice tradition of holding a blood drive with the American Red Cross in the chapter house at 737 Comstock. We easily met the quota for number of participants, opening our doors to all of Greek life as well as the entire Syracuse University community. The blood that was donated has the potential to save more than 160 lives. We also participated in OttoTHON, a campus-wide dance marathon that raises money for the same cause as our Derby Days philanthropy, Upstate Golisano Children's Hospital. This is an event the Greek life on campus is striving to have a very large impact on in the coming years.

Our newest pledge class also took time to give back to our community at the Boys and Girls Club here in Syracuse. They spent time working the Halloween party there, painting faces, reading scary stories, and cleaning up afterward. We were ecstatic to see their initiative in making sure they gave back.

A handful of brothers and myself were fortunate enough to take a tour of the newly renovated children's floor in the hospital to see where our donations were going. We were amazed at the upbeat and fun environment that the hospital has created for all of its younger patients. We were excited to see that we had the honor of having the Triage Room named after the Psi Psi Chapter of Sigma Chi. This is the first room on the floor that every patient will spend some amount of time in. This was a special experience and a relationship we hope to continue to grow.

Ritual Updates Help Forge Bonds

P4B helped the Psi Psi Chapter put further emphasis on the Sigma Chi ritual. Though the new standards closely resemble our usual traditions, it highlighted the importance of our ritual and how impactful it is on the growth of our new members. In preparation, we reorganized our ritual closet to create a space that would allow efficient execution of our rituals. This played a crucial role in the success of our most recent initiation ceremony.

Complete dedication to the atmosphere of our rituals was another major contributor to the success of initiation. The black supper was performed in our trophy room, but we chose to cover the walls with black sheets. This small addition created a space that promoted absolute focus on the ritual being performed, instead of having the ritual performed in a surrounding that was already familiar to the new members.

We also chose to have the new members come to the house early in the morning to participate in the rituals consecutively before the initiation ceremony, rather than throughout the night. This removed the possibility of any isolated incident that would go against the principles of our ritual or the P4B guidelines.

The idea of a "ritual bridge" eased the new members into their understanding of the ritual. Activities such as Man in the Mirror and Candle Pass were favorites among our new members. The effectiveness of teaching the ritual in stride was proven by the success of our recent new member process.

Brothers Come Together For Fall Recruitment

This year, our fall rush process made me proud to be a Psi Psi. Being the recruitment chair as a senior, I wanted to make my mark but knew that wouldn't be possible without every single brother contributing and being on the same page. I made it known to the chapter how hard I had been working, from getting the rush shirts to setting up events, and in turn the brotherhood proved to have my back, showing up in great numbers with energy and excitement day in and day out to ensure a great future for our house.

Every brother showed a sense of engagement with the rush process and went out of his way to talk to as many potential new members as possible. The interactions I saw and the reactions from all the kids rushing showed me that the brothers in the house embody the true values of Sigma Chi, and I couldn't be prouder.

Bid day proved to be one of our most successful yet, as we went 12 for 12 and have a great group of new young men who I believe will go on to be leaders in our house. I couldn't be happier with how our fall rush process went, and to know that we have set the tone for a successful rush in the spring.

John Trop and Mike Yates for their many years of service. We cannot accomplish our goals without alumni who volunteer their time. The good work done by the chapter was recognized with a Peterson Significant Chapter Award, and the Board of Grand Trustees acknowledged our work with our fifth Outstanding House Corporation Award.

I remind all—you don't need to be a board member to make a difference, so if you want to participate, please let me know.

Proud to be a Sigma Chi, especially a Psi Psi.

Social Events Met With Success

This semester for the Psi Psi Chapter of Sigma Chi has gone very well. At the end of last semester, one of our chapter alumni, Drew Taggart of the Chainsmokers, came and performed a set of his music for the brotherhood and a small group of guests. It was a very influential moment for our chapter, as we were able to see one of our alumni who graduated in 2013 rise to the top of his craft and still not forget about his time spent at the Psi Psi Chapter.

This gave us momentum heading into this current social semester, in which we have thrown well organized parties that have gone smoothly. We are extremely excited to see what is in store for us in the upcoming months and we are excited to share our experiences with our brothers nationally.

Bonds of Brotherhood Extend Beyond the Hill

As a chapter, we pride ourselves on the lifelong bonds we build with our brothers throughout the duration of college. The sense of brotherhood is one that lasts indefinitely, because at the end of the day, we all have and will continue to be Psi Psis. The relationship between our undergraduate and alumni brothers is one that is strong, yet has the potential to be even more valuable and dynamic.

Gaining more attendance at alumni events, such as Homecoming weekend in the fall or the clambake in the spring, is one of our main ambitions moving forward. Not only is it a fun day for all in attendance, but it also allows the undergraduates and alumni to bond over similar experiences and really connect on a personal level. You wouldn't believe how easy it is to talk to someone who has probably shared so many of the same enjoyable times and memories as you under the same roof, no matter what their age.

Another beneficial aspect that comes from having good undergraduate-alumni relations is the advice and resources that can be provided when applying to jobs and internships. We know that our alumni would love to share their personal experiences and recommendations for pursuing careers, just as much as we undergraduate brothers would love to listen and learn. Since there is such a strong alumni presence in and around New York City, we think it would be a great idea to host a career/internship fair for Sigma Chi in the upcoming future. I know it would be something that the undergraduate brothers would really appreciate, and it would be a great way to reconnect all the past Psi Psis and Sigma Chi alike.

Being a Psi Psi/Sigma Chi in NYC

The New York City area is home to over 8,000 Sigma Chis from over 240 campuses across the county. Not surprisingly, Psi Psis are among the largest of the alumni groups. Sigs are supported by an active NYC Sigma Chi Alumni Chapter, providing local and visiting Psi Psis many reasons to feel at home in the Big Apple.

NYC Sigs enjoy social events with other fraternities and sorority alumnae groups, along with business networking sessions focusing on specific industries (finance, law, media/advertising, real estate, the theater). NYC Sigs give back, via community service projects, with New York Cares.

NYC Sig alumni also sustain the Sigma Chi ritual connection. In November, we conducted the White Rose Ceremony at founder William Lewis Lockwood's grave in Brooklyn.

There are many unique aspects (and pleasures) of being a NYC Sigma Chi. While New York City has only one NYC undergraduate chapter—Nu Nu at Columbia—it is the fraternity of the football team (35 Sig players). Each fall, Columbia Athletics hosts home game tailgates for New York City-area Sigma Chis that include free drinks and hot dogs. So see you next fall for some NYC football tailgating.

Whether it is for professional, personal, or just Sigma Chi fun, if you live in the New York City area, or simply get down to visit, NYC has a lot to offer Psi Psis and Sigma Chis. To find out more, or to join the NYC Sigma Chi Alumni Chapter, check out the nycsig.org website, or follow on Facebook at www.facebook.com/groups/nycsig.

Chapter Continues

Our kitchen staff has been revamped. Our new chef, Smitty, has been doing a phenomenal job making sure that the men of Sigma Chi are well fed. Having a good relationship with the cooking staff makes life much easier for everyone involved. He listens to suggestions and provides us with a great dining experience overall. We hope to have Smitty for years to come to ensure a great experience for future brothers as well.

We have built a great relationship with Lisa, the house maintenance manager, who helps us in more ways than imaginable. Her hard work and dedication are the things that set us apart from other houses on this campus. She helps make sure things are in line for recruitment and makes sure she stays on top of any problems that may come our way.

Sigma Chi is always evolving to make sure it sets the standard for fraternities across the world. The newest initiative that was put in place was an online learning program for pledges called Preparation for Brotherhood, better known as P4B. P4B was put in place to create a pledge program that every chapter can execute, giving all Sigma Chis the same experience no matter what chapter they were initiated at. It was done to better educate and better protect the fraternity from problems the fraternity has seen in the past. Fall of 2016 was our first semester implementing it, and though it proved to be a major time commitment for our Magister and pledges alike, it gave them a better pledging experience overall. We are excited to work and grow with this program moving forward.

We are excited to welcome Mark Howard as our new chapter advisor for the Psi Psi Chapter. Mark has been a tremendous help throughout the semester with the implementation of P4B. One thing we love is that Mark is a Psi Psi and understands the deep tradition of this house in particular. His help with initiation made it one of the best I have seen yet. His dedication to the fraternity is shown in his work with the Binghamton colony, which is hoping to become a chapter in the coming months. We thank Mark for his hard work and look forward to growing with him as a chapter.

As my time as consul comes to a close in the next weeks, I am able to look back at all of the things I have learned during my time in a leadership position in the house. I am very happy with how the past year has gone. It has shown me how to work through adversity and be the bad guy when necessary. My job is to make sure the chapter is conducting business in the best possible way. Financially, we have been able to catch up with past bills; socially, we have been able to stay off social probation, and ritualistically we have completely cleaned up our ritual closet and will be placing an order for new ritual equipment in the coming months.

I have been able to see the strength of the chapter when tough times fall upon us, and the bigger meaning of the brotherhood we create here. All of the other elected officials have made my life much easier by making sure they were in control and always on top of their personal responsibilities, and I cannot thank them enough for that. I hope I have set an example for the house going forward to always be as good of a person as I can be, to think about others, and remember what I am here for.

The Psi Psi Chapter is in a great spot right now. There is starting to be consistency in all aspects of the house, which will make things easier for those with positions in the future. At Psi Psi, we look to build an environment that is uplifting and inspiring. Something that makes you want to be the best person and brother you can be. This energy is felt when you walk through the doors through the different experiences every member brings to the table. I can't say it enough that I believe this experience has been the best of all my experiences during my college years. It has provided me with opportunities and a family away from home. I am excited to see the younger men step up and continue the amazing traditions we have here at 737.

Guard Well,

Help Keep Psi Psi Alumni Connections Strong

Being a Psi Psi/Sigma Chi alumnus has too many unique advantages to let it slip away by being disconnected. Yes, we share unique experiences and memories of our days on Comstock Avenue. Yet more important—with over 1,200 Psi Psis and 250,000 Sigma Chis—there are so many current personal and professional interests to be shared with the connection you really do feel.

Having recently reconnected with many of my '60s Sigs, I was blown away with how quickly old memories were rekindled and fresh relationships were re-established.

In addition to updates on Psi Psi undergrad life, this Saltine Sig wants to focus on Psi Psi/Sigma Chi alumni life—from the perspective of today's undergrads and alumni (new grads, established, and retired). Since we live our lives in the present, I invite you to offer your two cents worth on what being a Psi Psi/Sig means to you today, and what you would like it to be. We will share your Psi Psi/Sigma Chi perspective on the website and in the next issue of the Saltine Sig. Just email me your thoughts.

Join the connection team

It is likely that we would like to connect most with those who we spent time with at SU, and those who live near us or are in the same business. So why not be part of a connection team for your most connected Psi Psi brothers? Respond to me by email if you would like to be part of a Psi Psi brothers connection team.

Be a connected Psi Psi brother

We try to keep you connected via the Saltine Sig, email, and even "snail mail." Yet there are many of our brothers for whom we do not have email addresses, and have not heard from. So you are not among the missing, simply send me an email or log in to psipsi.org or via Facebook to let us know you want to be connected.

As you gather from the above, we want to hear from you, whether it is your thoughts on being a Psi Psi/Sigma Chi, to help connect our brothers, or simply to let us know that you have received this Saltine Sig and want to stay connected.

Let's get connected, Psi Psi brothers.

Are We Sigma Chis By Accident?

Some years back, I was at a Sigma Chi alumni meeting at the Delta Psi chapter at RPI. The Grand Praetor at the time, Ron Mombello, asked a thought provoking question: "Are we Sigma Chis by accident?"

I had never thought about it, but of course he was right. With the exception of some legacies, we all pretty much stumbled into Sigma Chi during rush, confused, a bit scared, and not really sure what we were doing at all. We might have known an upperclassman who was a Sig, but even that didn't mean much—just an invitation.

Rush was a jumble of houses, coffee, and answering more questions than asking them—we didn't know what to ask anyway. In the end, someone asked if I wanted a pledge pin. I muttered, "Yeah, sure," and I was congratulated and welcomed into the Psi Psi Chapter of Sigma Chi. I went home, still not quite sure what had happened.

Hardly an auspicious, cloud-parting occasion.

Decades later, I remembered that moment, and realized how important and life-changing it was. Like the ritual itself, Sigma Chi is gradually revealed to you over time. As an undergrad, Sigma Chi is a whirlwind of parties, meetings, classes, and the realization that you are part of something special and very cool. You also begin to form friendships that mean more than just drinking buddies and classmates. Sigma Chi is taking root, and if you're lucky and attentive, those roots grow deeper than you know.

As you progress through manhood, families, jobs, and life in general, Sigma Chi takes a back seat. But your home office still has your Initiation plaque on the wall among other certificates and pictures. It is still there, always there. The ritual is still in your heart, even though you don't know it. And every once in a while, the subject of college fraternities comes up, usually in a negative way. You hope it's not a Sigma Chi chapter, and it rarely or never is. You take a quiet pride in that. And when asked about your fraternity affiliation, you reflexively speak the words you've always spoken: "I am a Sigma Chi." Present tense. Always.

Everyone makes lifelong friendships in college. But friendships within Sigma Chi are different. Along with the usual shared laughter and stories comes a knowing nod, a special bond that was forged at Initiation. A knowledge that this man is a brother, someone who knows what you know, who believes what you believe. Someone who has received the same gift you have received, and who treasures it deeply and quietly.

Every fraternity purports to offer this. Some may even deliver it, but I doubt it. Yes, I am a Sigma Chi by accident. But it was the most propitious accident of my life. Sigma Chi gave me a solid foundation, a no-nonsense set of grounding beliefs that serve me to this day. It asserts itself in my soul when I say, proudly, and with no doubt or hesitation: "I am a Sigma Chi."

Present tense. Always.
